Victoria Berryhill:I do, both directly and in an advisory capacity.

Suzanne Kramer-Brenna:I regularly meet with our PR and Informaiton Coordinator

Angela White:i do

alison lucas:I do!

Tricia Hein:occaisonally

Lisa Garcia:Life Crisis Center, Salisbury, MD

Yuriana Sobrino:We do

Karen Monahan:Oversee all communications for org

Ottoniel Perez:We have a communication director

Melissa Dickey:I manage our FB/Social media page.....and share articles as appropriate

Laura Combs:Communications department

Lisa Garcia:we do

Frances Sullivan:Frances Sullivan, I usually will contact people about our center.

Ruth Atkins:we can get attention with media for childhood trauma... but we don't have a good "ask" for the community

Zima Creason:Worried about stigmatizing mental illness. Too much tie to violence and mental illness.

Janet Olsen:oversimplification of the issues

Tara Mclean:Desensitization to violence

Leesa McNeil:The coverage is often in terms of the adult -- not the child.

Monica Thomas:not enough information as well as correct information!!!

Catherine Townsend:trauma drama, not solutions!

Cathy Mirra:Misrepresentation

Karen Monahan:we deal with child sexual abuse which is a taboo issue. no one wants to hear/talk about it alison lucas:The weight of the messages makes some people turn immediately away. It's difficult to maintain interest and momentum with painful issues.

Rose Pelej:murder - suicide of family

Jo Simonsen:portrayed as stress when actually connected to DV in many cases.

Talitha James:Im concerned about the lack of training with police enforcement when working with youth experiencing trauma

Tia Barnes:Concern: misunderstanding of how to create programming that hinders youth

Jasmin Ayala>Hello my name is Jasmin Ayala, HOPES Early Childhood Hoboken NJ

Laura Combs:overdramatize

Holly Ketchum:people are quick to blame individuals when sometimes systems are as much or more to blame for wounding

Kerry Fitzgerald:trauma doesn't have to mean exposure to violence

James Seavers 3:Stereotyping cultures

Enny Torres-Yanez:victim blaming, lack of resources

Kerry Fitzgerald:but that's all that seems to be covered

Mike Mason:Concern: triggers, copycat crimes

Tierney Ducharme:I work for a human rights organization. To make an issue like human trafficking resonate with masses, you need a strong story. Would love to hear how you balance child rights and protecting the dignity of survivors, while also interviewing and sharing these powerful human stories.

Jasmin Ayala:It took me a while to get in here. I guess something was wrong with my computer Leesa McNeil:Our inability to take about specific minors we would use generalities of situations to educate about a factor.

Jo Simonsen:myth perpetuation of parental alienation as a thing, when its debunked

Chris Morin:'We are involved with the Enough Abuse Campaign, preventing child sexual abuse. We plan public forums and very few people show up. Very hard topic to talk about.

Gina Walker:Media has a disbelief in trauma may be a direct result of the child's behavior rather than pure choice

Chris Morin:Chris Morin people don't believe children

Cody Schraft:fail to acknowledge the survivor of trauma

Tishawn Thames:doesnt give the full story

Tom Bradach:news about trauma without any next steps or ways to mitigate its effects jeanna robinson:in my work in a domestic violence there is an ignorance of the trauma for children.

Paula Massey 2:many people don't understand that children are generally resilient and can cope adequately with trauma, when provided appropriate services.

John Richardson-Lauve:talked with local school system recently about trauma-- they thought I was coming to talk about sports head injuries.

Jasmin Delgado:children who are victims of childhood trauma seemed to be blamed for their "adverse" behaviors as a result of the abuse

Jeremy Pieper:the focus on punishment rather than resilience/life enhancement/recovery

Kerry Fitzgerald:"nothing is being share" instead of slidea

Kerry Fitzgerald:slides are back

Kisha Forcheney:Philicia Douglas, Center Against Domestic Violence, New York, NY

John Richardson-Lauve:Spoke recently with local grief summit and had to generalize trauma beyond ACEs to be relevant to the audience. Took a lot of work to link grief and loss with trauma.

Brandy Alexander:Brandy Alexander-Children's Protective Services Michigan

Martha Smith:Martha Smith, MO DHSS, MCH Program

Darla Bair:The news seems to be about making money, so the more sensational the mores stories that get read. Tough to be a child and share your story if that is the result.

Fozia Eskew:Just was able to log on...had technical difficulties! Fozia Eskew Georgia AAP arbatman@bmsg.org:BMSG's "Talking about Trauma" memo describes this research in more detail:

<http://bmsg.org/resources/publications/talking-about-trauma-findings-and-opportunities-analysis-news-coverage>

Jose Banos:great article, thanks for the info

Kristen Giblin 2:I just got in - I had technical difficulties as well. Does anyone know if the presentation slides will be available after the webinar?

Jasmin Ayala:Thank you for sharing the article!

jennifer rose:Kristen, the slides will be available.

arbatman@bmsg.org:Yes Kristen - the slides will be available after.,

Christy McMillan:Was finally able to connect. Tech issues getting on.

Kristen Giblin 2:Thank you Jennifer Rose.

Natalia Borrero:yes! I focus solely on prevention work with teens and Domestic violence

Mike Mason:NOPE!

Beatriz Garcia:unfortunately, we tend to be crisis driven and little funding for prevention.

Gina Walker:Trauma has to be acknowledge before it can be discussed.

Natalia Borrero:some schools tell us this doesn't have here

Holly Ketchum:yes, because a lot of societal "norms" would need to change for us to truly prevent trauma and promot resilience as a society.

Alda Jones:People don't think it will happen to them or someone they know until it does.

Suzanne Kramer-Brenna:Challenging in the lack of understanding in what prevention means.

Angela Vanveckhoven:Yes! Most people think of the "portrait" and that they have no role in prevention.

Monica Thomas:It is difficult to talk about prevention when the understanding is not present or accepted.

Leesa McNeil:Prevention coverage may be coverage on trainings that are held for professionals that gather together for such training.

Kerry Fitzgerald:it is...I find that people either get scared about talking about it, or they automatically assume the worst

Mike Mason:Transparency & importance

Enny Torres-Yanez:Lack of material

Deborah Franklin:Difficult because there are some many factors involved.

Carrie Radcliffe:crisis and trauma informed only

Tricia Hein:so many things may cause trauma, so there is no one clear cut solution to prevention. Most people don't like that

Jose Banos:yes, trauma can be challenging because everyone's mental health is different many factors involved

Alice Torre 5:Our experience in prevention is to focus on our students in our school based programs

Beatriz Garcia:There is more on schools being trauma informed.

Joseph Martin:It is - sources of trauma often seem too large and complex to concisely discuss a solution

Cody Schraft:prevention requires institutional changes vs treatment requires individual changes

Shelley Holt 2:Finding the appropriate and useful resources to ensure that we are speaking and educating from a fact based as opposed to opinion based perspective.

Frances Sullivan:Yes! Some people have no idea what we might be talking about! But then get interested! Need more Data for people to see.

Talitha James:many of us can't identify the difference let alone understand the internal work that must be done to successfully address trauma

Ashley Beltran-Gonzalez:cultures that don't see trauma as "Trauma"

Paula Massey 2:There's a notion that talking about possible events will increase the number of incidents.

Gina Walker:prevention and intervention is an on-going issue not a one time focus

Jeremy Pieper:it can be when the audience doesn't understand what trauma is and doesn't recognize that it is present everywhere

Jose Banos:some may need specific type of prevention

Jasmin Delgado:Yes because talking about trauma might entail talking about child rearing and discipline

Enny Torres-Yanez:Lack of cultural sensitivity

Bianca Sifuentes:It's challenging when people don't believe that trauma is something that can happen to them or someone they are related to. So it's not talked.. until it happens to them.

Holly White-Wolfe 2:The topics feels very big and difficult to address in its entirety

Talitha James:Trauma is not sexyyet!

Patricia Aguirre:I am interested in obtaining more information to better educate myself in this area! :)

Enny Torres-Yanez:Fear of systems like CPS, police

Joseph Martin:there are many perspectives on "who is responsible" for preventing trauma

John Richardson-Lauve:Targeting prevention on those most at risk is also targeting society's forgotten and those for whom services are so often crisis related. It is seen as pre-destined, not preventable.

Mora Pressley:I think people have a big idea about what is defined as trauma and forget about the day to day traum to youth experience...

Jeremy Pieper:I second Enny's comment about fear of systems

Tara Mclean:Prevention involves major systemic changes

Patricia Aguirre:Nice answer Bianca Sifuentes!

Deseri Dillard:I'm loving this converstation about prevention

Soniell Thomas:it is Challenging

Madelyn James:wwe have found when people understand ACEs they are more able to accept trauma.

Jeremy Pieper:in a purely business sense, people don't recognize the savings in prevention vs treatment

Alda Jones:the lobster in the pot doesn't realiize the pot is beginning to boil. It's just "life" to many of those experiencing it.

Fozia Eskew:Denial that poverty is a risk factor....

Patricia Aguirre:Alda Jones nice comment...

Suzanne Kramer-Brenna:Clinical language. I often hear "victim blaming".

Jo Simonsen:parents not covered?

Margo Smith:one recent sample coverage by Nancy Cambria in St. Louis:

<http://graphics.stltoday.com/apps/stress/>

arbatman@bmsg.org:For a summary of BMSG's research on childhood trauma in the news, visit:
<http://www.bmsg.org/blog/how-childhood-trauma-appears-news>

Mora Pressley:This is shocking that educators are absent from this list as they are often the first responders to a traumatic experience for school-aged youth.

Jessica O'Connor:Schoolshave children for such a large portion of the day. School need to be more well versed in prevention and risk factors.

Jeremy Pieper:I was suprised that government was so low on the list since that's where the systemic change needs to occur

Patricia Aguirre:I WANT MORE INFO I AM INTERESTED!!!!!! I WORK WITH CHILDREN AND WOULD LOVE THESE RESOURCES!

James Seavers 3:How do national nonprofit advocacy organizations fit in?

Beatriz Garcia:Schools are usually involved after a trauamatic event. Rarely are invited to discuss prevention.

Patricia Aguirre:THANK YOU! :)

Ashley Beltran-Gonzalez:we parents not taken into consideration

Leesa McNeil:Confidentiality of the youth's case/health info is a factor.

Mike Mason:LEARN MORE ABOUT: Direct link between ACES & physical health issues

Tara Mclean:How do we engage leaders in the discussion of prevention trauma and resilience?

Patricia Haddad 2:does the breakdown differe between different types of maltreatment or violence prevention?

jennifer rose:A recording of the webinar will be available as well.

Fozia Eskew:secondary exposure to toxic stress leann keck:Our program, Trauma Smart supports the caregivers in the children's lives including teachers and parents to ensure they are educated about trauma and have specific skills to support the children!

Marcy Witherspoon:How does the community fit into the messaging?

Casey Keene:What about the voices of those who experienced trauma in childhood? Perhaps their stories are the way to promote messages of resilience

Robin Saenger 2:I am surprised that the general public doesn't share the conversation..as long as it's talked about mainly in the professional realm, it will not be mainstream..that's the goal, not downstream vs upstream, but how to make the topic mainstream..in community.

Sofia Campos:Surprises me that considering the high investments coming from the government agencies (3M according to this webinar), they are not working as main advocates in this discussion. Are the health professionals represeing the giovernment view or the gorvernment just decided to not address a issue because of the stigma involved?

Alice Torre 5:We have found in our school based programs that education of the teachers and school personel along with the students and parents is very helpful. it does take a comprehensive approach

Ashley Beltran-Gonzalez:the findings are showing how much of a need there is for PREVENTION so we dont need so much INTERVENTION

Joseph Martin:I would be interested to know more about how Media messaging re: childhood trauma affected public opinion and publice awareness

Mora Pressley:I would like to learn more about traumatic experiences and the link to youth with disabiltiies. Is there a higher link to this population of youth?

Paula Massey 2:I'm surprised that schools are not more active in that discussion.

Tara Mclean:There is so much shame and self blame involved in those childhood traumas.

leann keck:Trauma Smart has defintely learned that the prevention approach is essential

Tricia Hein:I was pleasantly surprised that victims were second on the list. It seems that victims do not get as much of a voice in news articles

Holly Ketchum:sometimes media reporting of a community trauma causes further trauma in children exposed to media pat frost:the state boards of education need to lead this and then districts will follow perhaps Beatriz Garcia:LAUSD is a leader in trauma in schools. Have surveyed children on trauma exposure and train all mental health staff and schools on being trauma informed.

Stacey Ettawageshik:A lot of parents unfortunately think they have "created a monster", have a client with a 16 year old daughter that was just charged with domestic violence and maleicious destruction of property...

Alice Torre 5:We have only twelve in school programs because of the lack of resources There is a demand from many schools that would like to have similar programs in their schools

Alda Jones:AMEN! The media re-traumatizes young children with visual images that they have no context for.

pat frost:cross systems training would help in collaboration of systems working with communities in justice, HHS, educ, faith based

Laura Brown:Agree with Alice -- schools often overwhelmed and not focussed on systemic trauma

pat frost:in small rural areas the local lions club, fire dept, etc community centers working with schools

Beatriz Garcia:Schools overwhelmed is true.

arbatman@bmsg.org:The RYSE center, based in Richmond, CA focuses on social justice issues related to youth: <http://www.rysecenter.org/> leann keck:We have had success with assisting schools with shifting to utilizing their trauma lens throughout everyday actions.

leann keck:It moves from one more thing to do, to the way you approach life.

Jose Banos:trauma is everywhere we live in a traumatic world

Leesa McNeil:When professionals are being trained or gather for training.

Major W. Harris, Jr.:With more conversation about how Mentoring can help with ACES!

Robin Saenger 2:i agree leann. it's a shift in perspective

Jessica O'Connor:Pat Frost, what you're describing sounds like the Wraparound initiative happening in many states. They include and collaborate with non traditional sources within the community for support.

pat frost:social media would be a tool too

Major W. Harris, Jr.:Followed by more people becoming Mentors. This will help with Healthcare, Business, etc.

Janine Koffel: Military children often live with the underlying stress of worrying about their parent's safety; news of mishaps, military engagement, etc, are also 'childhood trauma' for these kids; interestingly, they're also remarkably resilient. So, if you live in a military community, don't overlook the opportunity to partner with the military in supporting families and children.

pat frost:hook into college trainig for future teachers

John Richardson-Lauve:community violence

Tia Barnes:social-emotional learning

Tanya McLean:homelessness

Christy McMillan:The Army provides Resiliency training to families as well. They also have a youth program

Grace Harris:bullying

Robin Saenger 2:substance abuse

Gina Walker:incest

Jeremy Pieper:trying a child as an adult

Charlene McGee:the plight of refugees - no one speaks about how US foreign policy causes forced migration

Patricia Aguirre:bULLYING

Darla Bair:I agree Jose Banos. I don't think any human has ever escaped trauma. The question for me is why certain traumatic events affect individuals so differently. Learning how to teach resiliency to all humans would be helpful. The area I live in has too many suicides.

Enny Torres-Yanez:goverment funding

Ashley Beltran-Gonzalez:culture and family discipline

leann keck:significance of early childhood education

GAIL MCCLURE:Disproportionate implementation of school discipline/suspension policies based upon race

Holly Ketchum:We do have these dialogues within our organization (how childhood trauma of their own may impact Head Start teachers), but it is not in the media

Darla Bair:Same here Holly Ketchum

Major W. Harris, Jr.:Mentoring strengthens resiliency, thus helping youth to overcome some of their ACES.

Leann Keck:Holly- Trauma Smart supports teachers with how to work through their own trauma and that some behaviors may be triggers of theirs due to past trauma.

Madelyn James:Stories about how businesses support preventing trauma with their Employee Assistance program (EAP)

Holly Ketchum:Leann, how does someone connect with the Trauma Smart program?

Leann Keck:trauma smart.org

Pat Frost:pet shops and the aspect of helping folks with trauma

Beatriz Garcia:Schools can develop collaborative groups that include reps from DCFS, Probation, community, etc. We all need to share the responsibility of addressing trauma.

Holly Ketchum:thank you, Leann

Leann Keck:i agree, it's definitely a community approach

Darla Bair:Thanks Leann

Beatriz Garcia:We need to mention more the ripple effect when a student is shot..cousins, friends, siblings are affected and may attend many schools.

Pat Frost:girl scouts, boy scouts start young with the theme

Vanessa A Callahan:Thanks Leann

Alice Torre 5:Can we include trauma informed training into the Universities that are educating our future teachers? Universities can take the lead on this pat frost:older folks homes, story telling to young classes visiting about their life of resiliency in older folks stories

Nancy Reitman 2: Sports hero overcoming ACEs

Beatriz Garcia:Good idea Alice Torre

Christy McMillan:I think that is a great idea Alice!

Casey Keene:many professional athletes can (and have) shared stories of how trauma has impacted their lives

Bri Stormer:Movies like Spotlight provide an opportunity to talk about childhood trauma within entertainment news

leann keck:normalizing trauma

Darla Bair:I like the connecting ideas you are sharing Pat Frost.

Aurora Lopez:Reaching out to well-known people who are willing to share their stories with youth especially

Holly White-Wolfe 2:Movies like Paper Tigers

Marcy Witherspoon:Early Intervention Providers need to know about how toxic stress impacts their students' social emotional development - via books, songs, and storytelling as well as resilience building strategies

Beatriz Garcia:When actors get involved- Mega World Peace, we get lots of attention.

Madelyn James:Stories on environmental issues like Flint, Michigan.

Jacqueline Crain:Resilience movie as well (sister movie to paper tigers)

Holly Ketchum:art exhibits that reflect trauma impact (we had an exhibit locally by someone featuring silhouettes of slave scenes)

Wendy Lincoln:art exhibits or entertainment highlighting DV, abuse etc.

Jessica O'Connor:Adult mental health services need to include a parenting component. Mentally ill people do not exist in a bubble. their mental illness effects their children. Systems (mental health) need to support mentally ill parents

Deborah Franklin:vilolence at the hands of athletes and the childhood trauma that is sometimes at the root of it

Gina Walker:the war and the return of the soldiers who are experiencing trauma and the governments shift to hiring many social workers

Karen Monahan:Crisis response educational kit for communities

Bianca Madrid:mental health professionals fully trauma-informed trained

Tanya McLean:Thank you Paula Massey

leann keck:college students, help make the shift before in the field

Bianca Madrid:human/socially service providers

Beatriz Garcia:I've authored book to help students heal from trauma, A Bad Thing Happened At My School.

Tricia Hein:would like to see mental health discussed in the news more, not just when there has been a mass shooting

Cherie Estrada:With the work we do here at the IL Chapter of the American Academy of Pediatrics, we do know that PTSD and Toxic Stress, while similar, are significantly different. , and need to be treated as such pat frost:such great ideas, thanks!

Natalia Borrero:Leann I agree that we should include more youth voice. schools should be incorporating more narratives about they things they are doing well, using peace circles,

Bianca Madrid:law enforcement!

Jessica O'Connor:yes, Bianca!

Donna Eckwortzel :this is a local, in my home or next door problem, not "somewhere elses": problem so change the conversation and reduce the shame

Bianca Madrid:thanks Jessica!
